

To whom it may concern,

I am writing a brief letter to discuss a very unique person. His name is Chad Evans. I first met Chad at McDonalds, in Keene, which is where I was first employed by. I didn't even have to introduce myself. He came walking right up to me, and introduced himself with a huge smile on his face. He had a great attitude and was very nice when he was talking to me.

I have known Chad since I have been employed by McDonalds in the fall of 1994. Chad is a wonderful person. He is nice to everyone he meets. He treats everyone with the same respect. He treats them as though they were equal. That is something that I can't say about everyone. He is always willing to help out, or give some type of knowledge that he has gained throughout his years of experience. He would never get mad at anything and was always patient whenever anyone asked a question. No matter how ignorant the question was.

Till this day, I have never seen anything other than a smile on his face or a certain niceness that surrounded him. To a lot of people and I, Chad reminds us of a big teddy bear. Because that is what kind of person he is.

I can remember one incident when he had a lot of patience. Chad came into McDonalds, in Keene, with his son Brent. I think he was about 3. He had a lot of things he had to get done. He was there to see how our three UHC cabinets worked during breakfast. So he had to take some measurements and do a few things to see if it would work in his stores. Well Brent kept asking him a lot of questions. Chad always stopped what he was doing to make the time to answer any questions that he had. Or anyone else's questions that approached him that day.

Needless to say, Chad is a one of a kind person. He has a lot to offer people. Between his wisdom and his personality.

Sincerely,
